New Equipment Designation

1. The following designation was assigned 19 December 1958:

CU-7 . . . Preset Time Delay Unit. This equipment consists of an automatic wrist watch movement and case that has been fitted with a printed circuit in lieu of a dial, and a contact brush structure in lieu of hands. This timer is designed to:

- 1) start automatically when rotated on its diametrical axis,
- 2) time an interval of time up to 10 hours,
- 3) close to SPST switches at the end of the timing interval and stop the watch with contacts closed.

The CU-7 is delivered with a mechanical detent which prevents the winding rotor from moving. The timer may be wound in either of two fashions. These are:

- 1) By using the winding stem provided, it may be wound in a manner similar to a wrist watch.
- 2) By rotating the time delay unit 500 times around the diametrical axis.

The CU-7 has a built in slip clutch and cannot be overwound. Rotation speed should not be greater than 25 RPM.

2. This designation was made on a tentative basis pending approval of this memorandum.
